

Limerick founder builds project management for people who don't work in tech

New four-product platform launches city-first — aimed at the weddings, venues and committees that run Ireland's real projects.

LIMERICK, 1 September 2026 — Signal Studio, a software company built and headquartered in Limerick, today opens its four products to the public: Signal Notes, Signal Tasks, Signal Timeline and Signal — one calm system for coordination, made for people who would never call their work project management.

There were 19,898 weddings in Ireland last year, and most were planned in a group chat. Signal Studio's launch begins with the venues that host them: a venue carries a workspace for each couple on one annual licence, and the first twenty-five Limerick businesses join as numbered Founding Limerick Partners.

“Most of the projects in this country never get called one. We built the software those projects deserve.”

Ethan McNamara · Founder

McNamara — a certified Project Management Professional and Lean Six Sigma Black Belt whose career spans Apple and Verizon — built all four products himself, in the evenings, alongside a corporate role. The company launches Limerick first, then Ireland.
